

WHO WILL WE WORK WITH?

Bryce & Autumn Roberts

Bryce and Autumn Roberts have been married for 12 years and have 4 wonderful children ranging from ages 10 to 3, who keep them on their toes! They live and minister on the Wind River Indian Reservation, which is arguably one of the most beautiful places in Wyoming. They love to spend as much time in the outdoors as possible hiking, kayaking, and overlanding (yes, this is a thing). Their family motto is to “adventure for the Lord,” and they try to live this out every day while remembering to K.I.S.S as much as possible.

WIND RIVER RESERVATION

The Eastern Shoshone Tribe, now living on the Wind River Reservation in Wyoming, has been living, some say, in the Wind River mountain range and its environs for some 12,000 years. Recently discovered ancient cliff dwellings, attributed to Eastern Shoshone builders, in the Wind River Mountains are evidence of just how long the Shoshone Tribe has dwelled and hunted in these lands. By the early 1800s, the Eastern Shoshone band ranged along the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains from southwestern Wyoming to southwestern Montana. In the 1860s, the band camped for most of the year in the Wind River Valley, which the Shoshones call "Warm Valley", moving to the Fort Bridger area in Wyoming for the summer months.

The Northern Arapaho Tribe of Wyoming is one of four groups of Arapaho who originally occupied the headwaters of the Arkansas and Platte Rivers. They speak a variation of the Algonquin language, and are that people's most southwest extension. Culturally, they are Plains Indians, but socially and historically distinct. After signing the Treaty of 1851, the Arapaho and Cheyenne then shared land encompassing one-sixth of Wyoming, one-quarter of Colorado and parts of western Kansas and Nebraska. Later, when the Treaty of 1868 left the Northern Arapaho without a land base, they were placed with the Shoshone in west central Wyoming, on the Wind River Reservation. The Northern Arapaho are a federally recognized tribe.
